

Annual Report

FISCAL YEAR 2023

July 1, 2022 - June 30, 2023

"I grew up in foster care and while I didn't have a CASA, I had several people that probably filled that role for me. Because I had those people that were involved in my life, that is why I am here today. I absolutely believe that CASA's are absolute angels."

DEAR FRIENDS,

At the end of each fiscal year, we take time to reflect—to recognize the hard work and successes and to consider the opportunities and challenges that have impacted our work over the year. We want to celebrate another year of making a positive impact on the lives of children in our community by providing advocacy services to our most vulnerable citizens, children who have experienced abuse and neglect. We want to thank everyone who makes our work possible—our dedicated volunteers, our generous donors, our committed staff, and our caring community. Each and every one of you plays a crucial role in ensuring the continued success of our organization. In fiscal year 2023, with your support, we had 241 CASA Volunteers advocating for 500 children involved in 284 dependency and neglect cases.

We also want to acknowledge the challenge of a changing landscape in child welfare work. New federal legislation and funding—the Families First Act—has placed an emphasis on preventative services to help families provide stability and safety before a dependency and neglect case needs to be opened. This focus on prevention is a welcome effort to better serve children and families, but it has created a shift we did not fully anticipate. We saw a 35% drop year over year in the number of dependency and neglect cases filed in Adams and Broomfield Counties. As a result, CASA is now serving nearly 100% of viable cases in the 17th Judicial District. This change impacted Judicial Districts and CASA Programs around the state, and we continue to be one of the largest serving programs in Colorado.

Finally, we want to reflect on the opportunity created as we approach meeting the total need of children involved in dependency and neglect cases. At the core of its mission, CASA is dedicated to supporting children and families in the community, and rather than being complacent, we are taking this time to consider continued growth and service enhancements. We are in the process of developing a structure to provide CASA Volunteers for truancy cases, where some Advocates will be trained to specifically identify barriers to educational success, report them to the court, and help facilitate solutions for the students and their families. Additionally, we are working with community partners to identify opportunities to further support children and families who are experiencing crisis. CASA Volunteers will continue serving on dependency and neglect cases, as advocating for children who have experienced abuse and neglect remains at the center of our work at CASA.

This past year has been truly amazing, marked by significant milestones. We appreciate all of our stakeholders for your support in furthering our mission and in serving children and families across Adams and Broomfield Counties. We are excited to see how our organization will continue to grow and enhance services for children and families in crisis. Thank you for the part you are playing.

OUR VISION

To build a community where every child victim of abuse and neglect in Adams and Broomfield Counties is given the opportunity to thrive in a safe and loving home.

OUR MISSION

To provide court-appointed volunteer advocacy for children and youth from the child welfare system so every child can be safe, have a permanent home, and have the opportunity to thrive.

OUR COMMITMENT TO DIVERSITY, EQUITY & INCLUSION

Our organization stands committed to addressing the critical issue of diversity, equity, and inclusion within the child welfare system. Statistics nationwide continue to show that children of color and LGBTQ+ youth are disproportionately represented within the system compared to the population at large. There is an undeniable need for heightened volunteer representation to address this overrepresentation. As we work to cultivate a more diverse volunteer base, we know there is transformative power in representation and understanding.

With these diversity, equity, and inclusion efforts, we can forge a path towards a future where every child, regardless of their race, ethnicity, or background, is given the opportunity to thrive in a safe and loving home.

LETTER FROM A CASA VOLUNTEER

YOUR UNIQUE VOICE AND PRESENCE MATTER TO THE CHILDREN WE SERVE

by Christine Crosby

My path to becoming a CASA is like that of many others who want to make a difference in the lives of families and children. We all want to be a caring adult in the life of a child whose family cannot provide consistent support, or who needs a little extra help with life’s challenges. Our community is in alignment with our mission to support families in need; all we are missing is you. We need you at the table, we need your voice in the room.

You are different from other volunteers; your advocacy will be different. Take me for instance, what makes my advocacy different is my unique perspective and voice. I am an African American woman, who is LGBTQIA, and neurodiverse. Lucky me, right? I am all the “others” packaged in one human form. My otherness doesn’t make me a great CASA, my otherness makes me a CASA who gives voice and representation to many of the children and families who find themselves in the court system. The culture and ethnicity I come from affects the way I view the world; it also helps me connect to people of similar backgrounds. More importantly, it helps me voice that perspective and background to others who do not have a similar connection.

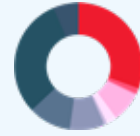

When an African American child asked for a CASA who looks like them, I was here to help. Our highest calling here at CASA is to develop a connection with a young person, offering support, compassion, and empathy. Hopefully, by answering that child’s call for someone who looks like them, I can help them to feel comfortable in a scary situation.

We have reserved your seat at the table; we are waiting to hear your voice raised in advocacy for our children and families. We need you.

Due to all children having an assigned gender at birth, gender demographics are mostly only obtainable in this way. We understand the limitations of a binary system and strive to continue to collect and present data in a way that is more inclusive while continuing to provide transparency in the data as it exists today.*

YEAR IN REVIEW

"It's important I'm making sure the children are safe, and getting to know the perspective of the adults involved. Providing consistency is the biggest part of the role. Always being there if I say I will, and building up the family by always integrating what the child wants with what the family can provide."

WAYS TO GIVE

When you give to CASA, you are helping to provide a voice for a child who may feel as though they do not have one. With your help, we can continue to strengthen families and build better futures for children and youth in our community.

There are many ways you can help Change a Child's Story:

PERSONAL GIVING

- Make a personal contribution*
- Become a recurring monthly donor*
- Leave a legacy and put CASA in your estate plan

WORKPLACE GIVING

- Choose CASA in your workplace giving campaign
- Ask about your company's matching gift program

EVENTS

- Attend CASA's signature events (Light of Hope and Indulge for CASA) and invite members of your network to attend with you
- Donate items to our silent and live auctions
- Share event sponsorship opportunities with your company

BOB LEMBKE

"I believe in the power of children-focused philanthropy, and CASA of Adams & Broomfield Counties stands as a beacon of hope and advocacy for our most vulnerable. Every child deserves a voice, a safe home, and a chance to thrive. CASA makes this possible, and that's why I proudly support this organization – because it's not just a charity; it's an investment in our future generation."

A STORY OF AGING OUT

Shai has been in the foster care system since she was 12, and Angela, her CASA Volunteer has been with her throughout this long journey. After five years, different homes and many changes, Shai is preparing to “age out” or emancipate. She says that starting in the system at such a young age, “you don’t really know what to do. You feel so out of control, and you feel so out of place.” She adds, “Connection is everything when you’re in the system. Without it, you know, kids have a lot of hard times.” Angela has been that constant and steady connection for Shai. Her advocacy and support have made this harrowing and heavy load just a little lighter. Shai says that when you have a CASA, it allows you to build a different relationship. Angela agrees, “You’re there by choice. And that really does mean something, I think. So, I’ve always kind of had the ability to be a little bit more neutral and just listen to her and not have to think about what legally can be done and all the other nuances of the case.” While Shai and Angela have formed this special bond, they both value the connection and support of her caseworker, Dani, and her counsel for youth, Jennifer. The three have created a team around Shai who ensure that she has all the resources and support she needs. She can reach out to them to ask questions or seek advice—and it’s not always about the case. They are her mentors and guidance counselors. Because of their consistency and unwavering support, Shai affectionately refers to them as her “cool aunts.”

With the caring and support of her cool aunts, Shai has a path and a plan. She wants to be a nurse practitioner or travel nurse. She sees it as her way of giving back because she has received so much and wants to give back to others. Her cool aunts have every confidence in her. Angela says, “She can really do anything she wants to do. She’s very smart. She’s driven.” Dani adds, “Shai is savage. She will be an amazing nurse, I think, especially given her experience.” And Jennifer says, “She is so resilient and is not going to let this chapter of her life define who she is.”

Shai has chosen to keep her case open, so while it is no longer a dependency and neglect case, she will still receive court-ordered resources, support, and services through her youth in transition case. She also will continue to get support from her three aunts—the professional team of her caseworker, her counsel for youth, and her CASA Volunteer. Shai believes in the importance of getting the best out of life, and she believes her support system has helped her get the best out of her life. “They have guided me through so much that they’re like family to me. They just really do mean a lot to me. To my cool aunts, I love you guys, and you guys are amazing.”

“You don’t really feel like you’re moving mountains, but you can see it. Those moments when the kids smile at you, or when they’re older and they pick up the phone and call you to ask for advice; those are the moments that show me the impact I have on my CASA kid.”

"As I saw my CASA kid arrive at the holiday party, I stood back to see if he would see me. Once we connected, we both instantly smiled and headed towards each other. A great hug and smile were followed by another warm greeting by his mom, grandma and younger cousin. They were so excited to see Santa, open their gifts, and participate in the activities. Coolest of all is that they both walked away with a bike, which was unexpected! The holiday party allowed the kids to be kids for a couple hours, what seemed to be a chunk of time that was worry-free for the whole family."
